- CNNMoney Tech December 18, 2012

CNN Money turns to former partner Michael Kasdan for comments on Apple's patent infringement case against Samsung:

Regarding Judge Koh's denial of Apple's request for an injunction against the Samsung products found by the jury to infringe: "Obviously, this is a serious and surprising set-back for Apple and its legal team," said Michael Kasdan, a partner at Amster Rothstein & Ebenstein. "it is extremely unusual in competitor vs. competitor cases for the patentee not to be granted an injunction. Apple will surely appeal."

Regarding, the Court's separate denial of Samsung's request for a new trial: "It was always a true uphill battle for Samsung, given the standards for showing that a new trial was warranted," said Kasdan.
